

PURPOSE OF COLLOQUIUM:

The purpose of the colloquium is to gather African American men and women in Academia and the Professions to interact among themselves in order to encourage each other in integrating their faith, learning, and ethnicity in a way that will bring glory to Christ, and service to the church and the community.

FORMAT OF COLLOQUIUM:

The colloquium will be a one day event with two main presenters followed by two responders per presenter. There will also be a presentation from a student who attempts to integrate his or her faith with the topic discussed. Time will be given for responses from the floor in addition to time for people from different academic disciplines to meet and discuss some of the unique issues and challenges that their discipline presents along with guidance on how to network effectively to encourage each other to face them. Lastly, we will entertain ideas and suggestions to move forward into the future.

MAIN PRESENTERS:

Professor Ron Potter

Ron Potter teaches Philosophy at Jackson State University in Jackson, Mississippi. He has contributed to several books including Black Theology, The Gospel in Black and White and Apologetics and Postmodernity. He is a lecturer in areas of apologetics, philosophy, and theology and has done much work in providing theological perspectives on black history and the contemporary experience of African Americans in the United States. As the first presenter, Professor Potter's topic will be Habits of the Mind, Habits of the Soul: On the Integration of Faith and the Life of the Mind

Dr. Harold Dean Trulear

Dr. Trulear is Senior Pastor of the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church of Twin Oaks, Pennsylvania, and currently teaches part time at Howard Divinity School. He has been a business executive with an organization seeking to provide public and private partnerships to respond to inner city challenges and issues. Dr. Trulear will be presenting the topic Practical Guidance in Faith Integration in Academia and the Professions.
